

CLEARING UP A MYSTERY

The Disappearance of Three Yukon Travelers Explained.

Indications That They Were Murdered for Their Money—Bodies Found Near Minto—Rough Named O'Brien Remained in a Strong Web of Circumstantial Evidence.

VICTORIA, B. C., March 22.—The mystery which has surrounded the disappearance of three Yukon travelers, Olsen, Clayton, and Rolfe, who were missed from the Yukon waterway in November last appears to be slowly but surely unfolding, so that, when the just-arrived Amur left Skagway, officers were said to be on the eve of completing a chain of evidence sufficient to bring the prisoner, O'Brien, as one of the principals.

Clayton and his companions, who were outbought from Dawson, had several thousand dollars in their pockets and it was concluded that murder had been added to robbery, and the bodies effectually disposed of. A short time after, a tough character of the border, giving the name of O'Brien, was arrested on suspicion of being implicated in the supposed crime, and although the evidence against him was not sufficient to hold him for the offense charged, the police succeeded by bringing forward other less important offences of which he was plainly guilty in holding him in custody. With the assistance of a Pinkerton man, engaged by Clayton's relatives, they industriously pursued all avenues of investigation.

Only circumstantial evidence was secured coupling O'Brien with the tragedy of the trail, until only a few weeks ago, while he was being taken to Selkirk in connection with a charge of robbing a snow, when two $100 banknotes were discovered sewn up in the feet of his socks, which by their numbers were clearly proved to be the property of the missing Clayton.

Now, by the Amur, comes the news of the finding of the bodies of the murdered trio. The bodies have been definitely located about three miles this side of Minto, on the river, and not far from the trail, so that the theory that three men following each other in the daylight, one man pushing or riding a bicycle, having all accidentally fallen into the same hole, is altogether untenable. The edges of the hole that was, but which now, of course, has long been frozen over, are much discolored with what has been proved on chemical analysis to be human blood. Near the spot of the burial was found a broken sleeve link and a pocket knife, both of which are particularly identified as having belonged to the members of the missing parties. In O'Brien's possession, too, have been found certain articles which are known beyond a doubt to have belonged to young Rolfe.

TINPLATE MILLS RUNNING.

A New Plant at Cumberland Now in Operation.

CUMBERLAND, Md., March 22.—The last of four 26-inch mills at the Independent Tinplate plant of N. & G. Taylor, of Philadelphia, in South Cumberland, is being put in shape for operation Monday. Then all the four mills will be in use and about 140 persons will be employed. South Cumberland has about recovered from the effects of the closing down of the Cumberland Tinplate mill by the trust, the independent concern filling the gap. The new plant is running smoothly in every way and is very busy. The Cumberland Valley Cement Works, at Cedar Cliff, five miles west of Cumberland, has resumed operations. New machinery will be put in and four new kilns added. It is the intention to manufacture 100,000 barrels of cement this season. These works had long been in litigation, but the present owners, who are business men of Washington, acquired them about a year ago. S. Dana Lincoln, of Washington, is president. The Allegany county branch of the National Horseholders' Protective Association was instituted Tuesday night by W. J. Moore, of Pittsburgh, national secretary and treasurer. The association will have about thirty members. Officers were elected, with Mr. Moore as president. The association is organized to protect the interests of horse owners in the county.

The Hile Murder Case.
ST. MARY'S W. Va., March 22.—The coroner's inquest over the remains of James C. Hile, who was shot and instantly killed by former Mayor Joe C. Noland Monday, was held yesterday. The jury, after a day's deliberation, rendered a verdict that death was caused by a pistol wound. The preliminary hearing of Noland, charged with murder, was begun yesterday. The first witness, Constable E. R. Riggs, swore that he handed Noland the revolver and told him to shoot, or he would be killed. Riggs was promptly arrested as accessory to the murder. The hearing was then postponed until Friday. Public sentiment seems to favor Noland.

Good Roads Bonds Defeated.
ST. MARY'S W. Va., March 22.—At the special election held Tuesday for the proposed issuing of $300,000 worth of bonds for the improvement of Wood county roads, the bonds were defeated by a good majority. While the majority of the people who voted against the bonds are in favor of good roads, they thought the scheme too uncertain and indefinite.

An Initiator of Sheldon.
MOUNTAIN VIEW, W. Va., March 22.—Mayor Parkinson has given out the information that he will soon attend the Sheldon plan for municipal government and run the city "as Jesus would." The new movement is being vigorously opposed here. The minority is making a vigorous objection.

Ended Life While Enjoying a Smoke.
SCRANTON, Pa., March 22.—With a lighted pipe in one hand and a smoking revolver in the other, John J. Allen, a machanic, recently returned from Central America, breathed his last yesterday afternoon at the home of his brother, Thomas Allen, of New Street. He had sent a bullet through his brain. Something which occurred to him in Central America weighed on his mind and he several times threatened to put an end to himself.

A CENTENNIAL CONFERENCE.

Virginia United Brethren Open Their Annual Session.

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 22.—The centennial session of the Virginia Annual Conference of the United Brethren Church convened here yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Bishop J. W. Hotz, of Dayton, Ohio, is presiding. It is a matter of interest that it was in this conference in 1852 that the presiding bishop was ordained to the ministry, a fact to which the bishop made touching reference in his opening remarks. He remained a member of the conference, but with one exception, this is his first visit to it in a period of ten years.

Thirty-four clerical and fifteen lay delegates responded at roll call. Rev. George P. Holt, presiding elder for Shenandoah district, was re-elected secretary of the conference. Under the call for presiding elders' reports Rev. J. D. Donovan, of Winchester, reported the work in fairly good condition. Seven new churches had been dedicated during the past year. Several others are in course of erection and one is nearly ready for dedication. Assessments for the past year were $1,000. C. T. Harper, of Berkeley circuit, in this district, was recommended for admission to the conference and the application was properly referred. In Shenandoah district Presiding Elder Hotz reported three new churches dedicated during the year, and the building in which the conference is sitting will be dedicated next Sunday. New church property in the district this year is valued at $3,000. Improvements to churches and parsonages have been valued at $5,000. Miss Ida Judy, of Winchester, was recommended for the district for membership in the conference. Rev. H. P. B. Blaney, of Berkeley Springs, was transferred at his own request to Rock River conference, in Illinois. After the transaction of routine business the standard committee was announced. Bishop Hotz preached last night, after which the conference communion was administered. For Friday a special program has been arranged to commemorate the one hundredth anniversary of the conference organization.

THOUGHT TO BE A CLOUTER

Confession of a Youth Arrested in Philadelphia.

He Goes to a Pawnshop to Raise Money on Silverware and Excites Suspicion—Received Instructions in Robbing From a Thief Who Is Now Dead—A Clever Operator.

PHILADELPHIA, March 22.—Loaded down with the proceeds of a robbery which he committed at Norristown, John Darnell, an innocent-looking youth, was caught in this city yesterday. He came here for the purpose of disposing of the plunder, consisting of a collection of silverware worth several hundred dollars and an overcoat, which he had stolen from the residence of John H. Cranks, at Norristown. A pawnbroker engaged in business at Thirteenth and Mt. Vernon Streets caused his arrest.

The young man called at the broker's establishment soon after it had been opened for the day and presented three valuable pieces of silverware, upon which he asked the loan of $1. The broker became suspicious and the young man became timid when he was asked certain questions. The broker sent one of his employees for a policeman without the youth knowing it, and when the policeman arrived the suspect almost fainted.

The youth said that the silverware had been given to him and declared that it would be an outrage to arrest him. He was, however, locked up, and when searched articles of silverware were found in every one of his pockets. He also had some concealed in the waistband of his trousers. The collection consisted of knives, forks, spoons, and many other things.

With the discovery of the additional articles which he had in his possession the prisoner confessed how he gained possession of them. He also admitted that he had stolen the overcoat and hat which he was wearing. If he said his first "job" was Norristown, he replied confirmed the prisoner's story. He said that he robbed the house single-handed. This statement amazed the police, for the youth looked anything but a thief.

The story of the robbery told when the young man was arraigned later in the day before Magistrate Jernon at the Central Police Court, showed that he executed the "job" like an experienced burglar. Although young in years, he is old in crime. It was not, if he said his first "job" was Norristown, he replied confirmed the prisoner's story. He said that he robbed the house single-handed. This statement amazed the police, for the youth looked anything but a thief.
